“ Good afternoon Everyone.

I'm grateful and delighted to see this smile as the last one etched in my memory of cousin Sadie.

Wednesdays were our time together in the last year before her move to New Jersey, and she had a funny way of asking for what she wanted. Before we left from our visits I'd say, "What do you want me to bring next week?" Her response was, "Chicken wings". Her roommate would sit at the table with us every now and then. One day we were about to leave when I asked her as usual, "What do you want me to bring next time?" She looked at me with that same smile from the picture and said, "You know I want chicken wings", and I said, "Ok." Then she looked around at her roommate and my daughter and said, "...and some tater salad to go with those wings. I might share next time". We all laughed. Well, the next week we brought the wings and "tater salad". She was in her room with a bag of squirrel nuts. (I knew then that my other first cousin had been there already. See, she'd eat the wings and she'd always save some of the candy he brought her for dessert. lol) She had her hair up in a bun and her skin was smooth and glowing. For some reason we stayed a little longer. We were laughing and talking about my mom and dad and our grands. We just had a beautiful day! When we left, she came with us to the elevator. We kissed her goodbye and as we got in, she sat there, smiled this smile, and waved until the doors closed. I never knew that was the last time we'd see this smile in person.

Sleep on cousin. Take your rest. We love you!

“ Sadies was a beautiful, sweet woman. It was an honor to be one of her nurses. I would sing to her while caring for her and her eyebrows would go up and her face would light up with a big smile. We all loved her very much. My prayers are with her family. Sadies my beautiful lady, I love you forever. Donna
